

BLOOM

after 35

COACHING PROGRAMS · 2026

The work of beginning again

An eight-session coaching program for women in transition — and a way to pass it on to the woman coming behind you.

VIVIANNE KIEFFER · FOUNDER & COACH · ICF ACC

WHO THIS IS FOR

Women in the middle of a change

Women mid-crossing — where the old ground has gone and the new ground has not yet arrived. You are not behind. You are between.

CHANGING CAREERS

You are excellent at something you no longer want to do

The competence is real and so is the exhaustion. The difficulty is not ability — it is that leaving something you are good at looks, from the outside, like throwing it away.

CHANGING COUNTRIES

Your credentials crossed the border. Your standing did not

A new market reads your history in a language it does not speak. You are starting from a rung well below the one you left, with all of the judgement and none of the recognition.

RESTARTING A CAREER

You did not stop being capable. You stopped being visible

After caregiving, illness, a move or a redundancy, the hardest part is rarely the skill. It is the gap on the page, and the story you have been taught to tell about it.

MOTHERHOOD AND WORK

Two whole identities, one calendar

Both are real, both are yours, and neither is a hobby. The work is holding them at the same time without disappearing into either one.

THE PROGRAM

Eight sessions, one crossing

Eight one-hour sessions across six to eight months, by video call, in English or Spanish. The spacing is deliberate — real change needs weeks between sessions in which to happen. The arc builds the ground before we choose a direction, and tests the direction before you commit to it.

FORMAT

8 × 60 minutes

Every two to four weeks, scheduled to your life rather than a fixed cohort. Rescheduling is expected, not penalised.

BETWEEN SESSIONS

The unthinkable, in steps

What happens between sessions is yours to choose and yours to carry — I cannot promise the doing. What I can promise is that we break what looks impossible into moves small enough to be taken. Short written support between sessions is included.

STANDARD

ICF-aligned coaching

Delivered to International Coaching Federation core competencies and code of ethics. What is said in the session stays in the session.

The change happens between the sessions, not inside them

A session is where you see something clearly. The weeks that follow are where the seeing turns into a conversation you actually have, an application you actually send, a boundary you actually hold. Compress the sessions and you get insight without evidence — which feels wonderful for a fortnight and changes nothing.

A transition also runs on the world's clock, not yours. Messages go unanswered for three weeks. The right role appears in month five. If coaching ends in eight weeks, it ends before the world has replied — and you are alone for the part that was actually difficult.

So the eight sessions are spread across six to eight months. Long enough for something to fail and for you to recover from it while still supported. Long enough for a new way of speaking about yourself to stop being a technique and start being simply how you speak. It is the same eight sessions and the same fee — what changes is that you are not doing the hard part alone.

THE ARC

What the eight sessions do

I Ground

Where you actually are, said out loud, without managing anyone's feelings about it. We set the coaching agreement and name what must be true by session eight.

YOU LEAVE WITH — a written statement of what this program is for.

2 Inventory

What you are carrying. Range, judgement, the capabilities that transfer across a career change or a border — including what the years out taught you that no job description lists.

YOU LEAVE WITH — an honest inventory of what you bring, not what you lack.

3 Narrative

The story you tell about the gap, the move, the pivot. Most women in transition are apologising for the most interesting decision they ever made. We rewrite it as a decision.

YOU LEAVE WITH — your transition told in two minutes, without apology.

4 Direction

Criteria before options. We decide what a good next chapter must contain — and what it must not — before we start judging the openings in front of you.

YOU LEAVE WITH — a short list of non-negotiables you can hold a decision against.

5 The Ask

Visibility and reach. Who needs to know what you can do, how they will find out, and how you ask for something without shrinking the request as you make it.

YOU LEAVE WITH — a specific list of people to reach and the words to reach them.

6 Voice

Presence in the room. Interviews, negotiations, the meeting where you say it once and it does not land. Authority is a practice, not a personality trait.

YOU LEAVE WITH — a rehearsed way of holding the room, including the hard question.

7 Evidence

What the real world said back. We look at what actually happened between sessions — the replies, the silences, the offers — and adjust from evidence rather than from fear.

YOU LEAVE WITH — a direction corrected by reality instead of assumption.

8 Anchor

What holds after I am gone. We consolidate what changed and hand you the questions, so the next transition does not require a coach to get through.

YOU LEAVE WITH — your own next chapter, and the questions to run it with.

HONEST FRAMING

What coaching is, and is not

The clearer this is before we start, the more the eight sessions are worth.

COACHING IS

- A thinking partnership — you do the deciding, out loud, with someone whose only agenda is your clarity
- Structured and confidential, held to ICF competencies and ethics
- Forward-facing: what you do next, tested against what actually happens
- Accountability that is warm and completely unavoidable
- Yours — the agenda for every session is set by you

COACHING IS NOT

- Therapy. It does not treat trauma, depression or anxiety, and I will say so and refer you if that is what is needed
- Consulting. I do not hand you my plan for your life
- Mentoring. I am not here to tell you how I did it
- A job-placement service, a guarantee of an offer, or a shortcut past the work
- Advice dressed up in questions

OUTCOMES

What changes

Coaching outcomes are individual and cannot be guaranteed. These are the changes women in transition most consistently report — and what we will be measuring against your own session-one statement.

INSIDE

You stop apologising

The gap, the move, the change of direction becomes something you chose and can explain — rather than something you hope no one asks about.

OUTWARD

You become findable

Your positioning, your language and your network start pointing at the same thing, so opportunities arrive rather than being hunted.

IN THE ROOM

You are heard the first time

Presence, pace and the ability to hold a hard question — in interviews, negotiations and the meetings that decide things.

DECISIONS

You choose on criteria

You stop weighing every option against every other option, because you know what a good answer has to contain before you look.

ENERGY

Both lives fit

Work and family stop competing for the same hour by default. Boundaries become structural rather than a matter of daily willpower.

AFTER

You keep the method

You leave with the questions, not the dependency. The next transition is something you can run yourself.

EVIDENCE

Does coaching actually work

A fair question, and one you should ask before spending money on anything.
Here is what the profession's own research reports.

80%

reported a positive change in self-esteem and self-confidence

96%

would do it again, given the same circumstances

3.4×

median return on investment reported by individual clients

Source: Final Report of the ICF Global Coaching Client Study — an online survey of 2,165 coaching clients across 64 countries, conducted by PricewaterhouseCoopers and Association Resource Centre for the International Coach Federation, September–November 2008, published 2009. All figures are client self-reported, and describe professional coaching in general rather than this program. Read the study.

More recently, and from outside the coaching industry: a 2022 peer-reviewed meta-analysis of twenty controlled studies found a large effect of coaching on goal attainment (Hedges's $g = 1.29$) and a moderate effect on self-efficacy ($g = 0.59$). Wang, Lai, Xu & McDowall, Journal of Work-Applied Management, 14(1), 77–101 — open access. Read the meta-analysis.

What I will not claim. No coach can guarantee you a role, a salary or an outcome, and any coach who does is selling you something else. What I can commit to is eight sessions held to a professional standard, a written statement in session one of what you came for, and an honest review in session eight of what moved and what did not.

COMING SOON

Results from my own clients

This space is deliberately empty. I would rather show you nothing than show you invented quotes. The women I am coaching now will be asked, when they finish, whether they want to share what changed — with their permission, in their own words, and anonymised if they prefer.

BLOOM FORWARD

Coaching that pays itself forward

The women who most need this work are usually the ones least able to pay for it — because being between things is exactly what makes it expensive. So the program funds itself, in a circle.

ONE

You receive

You are coached through your transition — at the band you can carry, or free of charge on a Pledge or Sponsored seat if you cannot carry any of it right now.

TWO

You get strong

The point of the eight sessions is that you land: a role, a business, a direction, an income. Not someday. That is what we are working toward.

THREE

You pass it on

When you are steady again, you fund a seat for a woman who is where you were. She is coached, she lands, and she funds the next one.

The Pledge is a promise, not a debt. If you take a free seat, you are invited — not required — to fund a woman later, when and if you are able. It is not a loan, it carries no legal obligation, no interest and no deadline, and nothing about your coaching depends on it. It is held in honour, which is the only way it works.

THE SCALE

What it costs, and who decides

One program, one scale. You choose your band yourself — I do not ask for proof. The bands describe situations, not countries: a woman in Frankfurt who has just lost her job belongs in Access, and a woman in Asunción earning in dollars belongs in Sustaining.

Sustaining

You are employed or your business is stable, or you earn in USD or EUR.

$600

USD · 8 × 60 min · $75 per session

- The full eight-session program
- Your fee holds the bands below open
- Payable in two instalments

MOST WOMEN CHOOSE THIS

Standard

A real investment that does not put you at risk.

$420

USD · 8 × 60 min · $52.50 per session

- The full eight-session program
- Identical in every respect to Sustaining
- Payable in two or four instalments

Access

Between roles, rebuilding, newly arrived, or in a market where $600 is a month's salary.

$300

USD · 8 × 60 min · $37.50 per session

- The full eight-session program
- No means test and no explanation asked
- Payable in four instalments

FREE · FUNDED BY THE CIRCLE

Sponsored seat

Paid for in full by another woman's contribution to the Bloom Forward fund. Free to you, and identical to every other seat. Offered as the fund allows.

FREE · STRICTLY LIMITED

Pledge seat

Free now, in exchange for a promise in honour to fund a woman later, when you are able. A small number are offered each year. Apply in a paragraph — tell me what you are crossing.

At signup you may add a Bloom Forward contribution. It is optional, it is never assumed, and it goes only to funding seats: +$75 funds one session for another woman · +$300 funds a full Access seat · +$600 funds an entire program. What the fund takes in and what it pays out is published once a year.

Founding rates, held for the first twenty-five women. Prices in USD; local transfer arranged where it is cheaper for you. Every band rises as the practice does — on completion of the ICF PCC credential the scale becomes $1,200 / $840 / $600.

YOUR COACH Vivianne Kieffer

Bloom After 35 began with a question I could not put down: why do so many capable women arrive at their most powerful decade and find the room has been arranged for someone else?

I coach women through the two transitions that most often collide in this chapter — the professional one and the personal one. Not to choose between them, but to hold both without losing yourself in either. I work in English and Spanish, from Asunción, with women across Latin America and Europe.

- ICF ACC — Associate Certified Coach, International Coaching Federation
- Currently accumulating hours toward the ICF PCC credential — which is part of why the founding rates are what they are
- Founder of Bloom After 35 and of Ikanothia, leadership development for managers
- Coaching delivered under the ICF Code of Ethics

BEFORE YOU WRITE

Questions worth asking

I do not know what I want yet. Is it too early?

No — that is the ordinary starting point, and sessions two to four are built for it. What would make it too early is wanting someone to tell you the answer. Coaching will not do that, and you would be disappointed.

Is this therapy?

Do you guarantee I will find a job?

Which band should I choose?

What if I cannot pay even the Access band?

Is the Pledge legally binding?

What language, and what time zone?

What if I need to pause or reschedule?

How do I pay, and in what currency?

What if I want to stop partway through?

Do you record our sessions?

Is what I say confidential?

THE NEXT STEP

Tell me what you are crossing

Book a thirty-minute conversation — free, no obligation, nothing to prepare. Or write to me first if that feels easier: where you are, what is changing, what you want to be true in six months.

BOOK A CONVERSATION

WRITE TO ME INSTEAD

ASUNCIÓN, PARAGUAY · ENGLISH & ESPAÑOL

© 2026 Bloom After 35 · Vivianne Kieffer, ICF ACC · bloomafter35.com